learners with Skateline, or form your own with at least three participants - their instructors (who have undergone an international certification programme) can address your different abilities. You can also move on to more intermediate classes, which include skating on different terrains like slopes or urban settings. Lessons are held at a rink in Bishan Park or East Coast Park. Four weekly lessons cost $80 and $100 per learner on weekdays and weekends respectively. Call 6289-0021 or visit www.skateline.com.sg

• SCUBA DIVING By buddying up with your child, you can look out for each other as you explore the underwater world. Both of you must be medically fit, be able to swim at least 200m and do a survival float of 10 minutes; your child should be at least 10 years old. Prices for a NAUI entry-level certification course at Mako Sub-Aquatics start from $640 per person and includes rental of dive equipment, pool sessions, classroom lessons and a weekend diving trip to Malaysia - price varies according to location. Call 6774-1440 or visit www.makosubaquatics.com

• ROCK CLIMBING At The Rock School's workshop for beginners, you'll warm up by playing games with your child before learning the ropes of belaying, while your kid learns to climb. You'll later pair up to scale the outdoor wall. These activities strengthen the trust between you and your child. The school has a special 7m-high wall for children climbing with equipment, as well as a low bouldering wall to clamber over. A two-hour » year-old ($140). Prices are for two sessions for a parent and a child, and include materials. Call 6338-7769 or visit www.claycove.com

• DRAMA Act 3 Drama Academy's popular "Sundays with Us" workshops for parents and two- or three-year-olds are back in December. Families are given scenarios that the kids are familiar with - like going to the zoo, on a picnic, on the bus - and guided into acting them out through role playing, storytelling and improvisation. Kids stretch their imagination, learn action words and develop locomotive skills. The workshops are on Dec 4 or 11; $45 for parent and child. Book in advance. Call 6735-9986 or visit www.act3international.com.sg

• Tahitian Dance Mummies, put on a pareu and join a class with Tahiti Dance and Fitness. The classes are geared towards your child (ages five to 10; classes are also available for 11- to 18-year-olds), but you'll be doing warmup and stretches, singing Tahitian songs, and dancing with accessories like hand tassels, fans or sticks. Classes cost $99 per month, per person. Call 9811-0971 or visit www.tahiti.sg
